FOREWORD

The Staff Officers' Field Manual should be considered as a compilation of principles, information, and data to be used as a guide for the operation of the staffs of all units and territorial commands, in peace and war, rather than a set of rules and regulations to be rigidly and blindly followed.

The manual will be published in three parts as follows:

PART ONE. Staff data.

1. Staff principles and functions.
2. Orders, reports, forms, and abbreviations.
3. Maps and special military symbols.

PART TWO. Technical and logistical data.

1. Weapons and ammunition data.
2. Field engineering data.
3. Signal communication data.
4. Evacuation data.
5. Supply and transport data.

PART THREE. Organization, road spaces, and camping areas.

CHAPTER 1

STAFF PRINCIPLES AND FUNCTIONS

SECTION I. General principles

1. Military organization.—The fundamental elements in any military organization are:
   a. Command elements, consisting of a single head or commander, together with such assistants or staff officers as are necessary to relieve him of the burden of details and enable him to exercise adequate control over his command.
   b. Combat elements, consisting of such combat troops as are necessary to carry out the combat mission assigned the organization.
   c. Service elements, consisting of such technical, supply, or administrative services as are necessary to maintain the fighting efficiency of the combat elements, as well as to carry out any service mission assigned the organization.
2. Development of the staff.—As the number of elements or units grouped under one commander is increased, a point is soon reached where the multiplicity of details requiring consideration by the commander is so great that they can not be handled by one person. Beginning at this point, each unit commander is provided with an appropriate staff.

3. Definition of staff.—The staff of a unit or organization consists of those officers specifically provided for the purpose of assisting the commander in exercising his command functions. Certain of these officers have no duties other than staff duties, while others have staff duties in addition to their primary functions as commanders of combat or service troops.

4. Classification of staff officers.—a. The staff of any unit may be divided into two groups as follows:

(1) A general staff group consisting of those officers who, as the staff assistants of the commander, are organized so as to comprehend all the functions of command. In the division and higher units, officers of the General Staff Corps are assigned for this purpose while in the brigade and lower units these duties are performed by officers of the arm or service to which the unit belongs, detailed as staff officers in accordance with Tables of Organization.

(2) A special staff group consisting of all other officers specifically provided for the purpose of assisting the commander in exercising his command functions. This group includes the heads of technical, supply, and administrative services, and certain technical specialists.

b. In divisions and higher units, these two groups are separate and distinct; while in brigades and lower units, they merge into each other, and one staff officer frequently is charged with duties of the general staff group as well as those pertaining to one or more of the special staff group.

c. Personal aides, as authorized by law for certain general officers, form a part of the commander's staff, but are not included in the unit staff. Their duties are prescribed by the general officer to whom they are assigned. They should keep the chief of staff or executive informed of the whereabouts of the commander and of the purport of any verbal instructions issued by him. They may be utilized as assistants in the general staff sections if so authorized by the commander.

d. Liaison officers are sent to adjacent coordinate units or from supporting to supported units for the purpose of procuring and transmitting promptly such information as is needed to insure effective cooperation between the two units. Liaison officers from supporting units act as tactical and technical advisers to the commander of the unit to which attached on matters concerning the supporting arm.

5. Command responsibility.—a. The commander of any unit is alone responsible to his superior for all the unit does or fails to do. Although he may be provided with a staff to relieve him of the burden of details and allow him time for consideration of the broader phases of his duties, he can not avoid his responsibility for all policies, plans, or basic decisions which affect the condition, morale, training, or employment of his command.

b. All orders and instructions from a higher unit to a subordinate unit are given to the commander thereof, and each individual is accustomed to look to his immediate superior for orders and instructions. By this means alone, authority and responsibility are definitely fixed and the channels of command definitely established.

6. Staff authority.—a. A staff officer, as such, has no authority to command. All policies, basic decisions, and plans, whether originating with the commander or with his subordinates, must be authorized by the commander before they are put into effect.

b. When the commander has decided upon a plan or policy, it is the duty of the staff officers of the general staff group to prepare and issue the orders or letters of instruction necessary to their execution and to follow up their execution. Where letters of instruction are issued, these staff officers will see that such orders as are necessary in the case are prepared and issued.
When it becomes necessary for a staff officer to issue an order in the name of the commander, responsibility for such an order remains with the commander even though he may not have seen the order as actually written or heard it as actually issued if given orally.

c. Staff officers of the special staff group may exercise similar authority with respect to orders only when specifically authorized by the commander or pursuant to routine established policies. Their staff functions are mainly advisory in nature to the commander and his general staff group. They have authority, however, to make such technical inspections in subordinate units and call for such technical reports from similar special staff officers of subordinate units as are necessary in supervising the execution of the work with which they are charged.

d. Certain special staff officers are also commanders of troops, or heads of technical, supply, or administrative services, and as such have the usual functions of command or control over such troops or services. These two functions of staff and command, although vested in a single individual, are separate and distinct in that each involves different responsibilities and duties, and the exercise of one should not be confused or permitted to interfere with the exercise of the other. On the contrary, this dual function of certain officers has many advantages in facilitating the proper discharge of both staff and command duties of the officers concerned.

e. The staff officer must not only have a thorough knowledge of the will and policies of his commander, but he must also have a full, first-hand knowledge of and sympathetic acquaintance with subordinate commanders and their units in order to operate successfully. In general, a staff officer should be an active, thoroughly posted assistant to the commander and an adviser and helper to subordinate commanders.

7. General functions of the staff.—The staff assists the commander in carrying out his command functions. It constantly anticipates and provides for the needs of the troops. It secures information for the commander, works out the details of his plan, translates his decision and plan into orders, causes such orders to be transmitted to the troops, observes the execution of these orders, and anticipates and initiates action, within the scope of its authority, to complete the carrying out of the commander's intentions.

8. Staff cooperation.—a. Teamwork is essential for efficient staff functioning. It is assured by proper cooperation and collaboration within and between all sections of the staff, between the staff and the troops of the unit, and with the staffs of lower higher, and adjacent units.

b. It is the duty of the general staff group to consult the special staff as to the ability of their respective services to perform the duties required of them in contemplated operations, and to give the special staff the earliest practicable information of such operations in order that they may have the necessary time for preparation.

c. It is the duty of each special staff officer to keep the general staff group constantly informed as to the condition and capabilities of his particular combat or service element in order that the commander and his general staff group may have at all times the necessary information on which to base plans and orders.

d. Staff conferences presided over by the unit commander, or in his absence by the chief of staff, held daily, or at more infrequent intervals, provide the commander with prompt verbal reports as to the condition of the command, promote cooperation by dissemination of information, and provide a means for settling difficulties which may have arisen, before they have had time to affect the efficiency of the command. Such conferences will include the commander and his general staff group and such additional special staff officers or commanders of combat elements as are deemed necessary by the commander.

9. Staff visits.—In order to obtain information for his commander as to the situation or condition of the command or to observe the execution of orders or instructions previously issued, a staff officer should visit subordinate units. Such visits are made in the name of the commander as his duly delegated representative. When making such a visit, the staff officer conducts himself so as to promote cordial relations and cooperation between the staff and the troops. He first calls on the commander of the unit concerned, informs him of the purpose of the visit, requests such assistance as is necessary, and before leaving reports to the commander such facts as have been noted. He carefully avoids criticism or unauthorized interference with the responsibilities of the subordinate commander. If it appears that the superior commander's wishes have been misunderstood, he furnishes the subordinate commander such additional information as is necessary, or in any other legitimate way does his utmost to assist the subordinate commander in comprehending the exact desires of his superior.

10. Staff organization.—a. Basis of organization.—The organization of a staff is based upon the duties of the commander whom it serves and is prescribed in Tables of Organization.

(1) The duties of all commanders can be divided into four principal functional groups as follows:

(a) Personnel.

(b) Military intelligence.

(c) Operations and training.

(d) Supply.
(2) These four subdivisions, together with a coordinating head, exist in the staffs of all units from the battalion to the general headquarters of the field forces. In the staffs of the smaller units of certain arms or services, the duties of two or more of these subdivisions may be performed by one staff officer, but the functional division of duties still exists.

b. Organization of general staff group.— (1) Division and higher units.—The general staff group of the division and higher units is organized into four sections with duties corresponding to the four principal functions indicated in a (1) above, together with the necessary coordinating personnel depending upon the size of the unit served. The chiefs of these four staff sections are designated as assistant chiefs of staff, G-1, G-2, G-3, and G-4, respectively. The organization of the general staff group includes—
   (a) A chief of staff.
   (b) A deputy chief of staff (for army and higher units).
   (c) A secretary of the general staff (for army and higher units).
   (d) A personnel section (first section).
   (e) A military intelligence section (second section).
   (f) An operations and training section (third section).
   (g) A supply section (fourth section).

(2) Brigade, regiment, and battalion.—In the brigade, regiment, and battalion, the general staff group as organized in the division is represented by the officers listed below. These officers, in so far as they perform the staff functions of the general staff group in the higher echelons, are designated as S-1, S-2, S-3, and S-4, respectively. (S-1, S-2, etc., stand for “Staff, first section,” “Staff, second section,” etc.)
   (a) Chief of staff by the executive officer.
   (b) Personnel section by the adjutant.
   (c) Military intelligence section by the intelligence officer.
   (d) Operations and training section by the plans and training officer.
   (e) Supply section by S-4.

c. Organization of special staff group.—The organization of the special staff group depends largely upon the duties and functions of the unit concerned.

(1) Divisions and higher units.—The special staff of divisions and higher units includes such of the following officers as belong to the unit:
(a) Adjutant general.
(b) Inspector.
(c) Judge advocate.
(d) Officer in charge of civil affairs (GHQ and other territorial commands when required).
(e) Finance officer.
(f) Chemical officer.
(g) Chaplain.

And the following officers who have special staff functions in addition to command duties:

(h) Chief of artillery (artillery commander in the division).
(i) Air officer (chief of aviation in corps and army)
(j) Engineer.
(k) Signal officer.
(l) Headquarters commandant.
(m) Provost marshal.
(n) Quartermaster.
(o) Surgeon.
(p) Ordnance officer.

(2) Brigades, regiments, and battalions.—The special staff of brigades, regiments, and battalions includes such of the following as belong to the unit:

(a) Adjutant.
(b) Chaplain.
(c) Surgeon.
(d) Munitions officer.
(e) Personnel adjutant.
(f) Reconnaissance officer.

And the following officers who have special staff functions in addition to command duties:

(g) Communication officer.
(h) Attached technical specialists.

d. Division into two echelons.—It is frequently necessary in combat for the unit headquarters to operate in two echelons. When the headquarters is thus divided, the forward echelon will usually include—

(1) For divisions and higher units—
(a) Chief of staff.
(b) Assistant chief of staff, G-1.
(c) Assistant chief of staff, G-2.
8 STAFF OFFICERS' FIELD MANUAL

(d) Assistant chief of staff, G-3.
(e) Assistant chief of staff, G-4.
(f) Chief of artillery (at artillery command post which should be at or near the forward echelon).
(g) Air officer.
(h) Engineer (at engineer command post which should be at or near the forward echelon).
(i) Signal officer.
(j) Chemical officer (division).
(k) Liaison officers from other units.
(2) For brigades and lower units—
(a) Executive.
(b) Intelligence officer, S-2.
(c) Plans and training officer, S-3.
(d) Reconnaissance officer (artillery).
(e) Communication officer.
(f) Liaison officers from other units.

11. Staff functions applicable to all units.—The functions of corresponding staff officers in all headquarters of combat units are generally similar in character but differ in scope and detail depending upon the size and nature of the units concerned. For this reason, the functions of the various staff officers or sections as enumerated herein have been made comprehensive enough to be applicable to all units. Those duties or functions which are not applicable to the staffs of smaller units or special arms may be disregarded when considering such staffs.

SECTION II

FUNCTIONS OF THE GENERAL STAFF GROUP

12. General statutory duties.—The duties of the general staff with troops shall be to render professional aid and assistance to the general officers over them; to act as their agents in harmonizing the plans, duties, and operations of the various organizations and services under their jurisdiction, in preparing detailed instructions for the execution of the plans of the commanding generals, and in supervising the execution of such instructions.—Section 5, national defense act, as amended by act June 4, 1920.

13. The chief of staff (or executive in brigades and lower units).—The chief of staff, or executive, is the principal assistant and adviser of the commander. He transmits the will of the commander to those who execute it and is the principal coordinating agency which insures the efficient functioning of the staff and of all troops of the command. He performs the following specific duties:

a. Formulates and announces policies for the general operation of the staff.

b. Directs and coordinates the work of the four staff sections of the general staff group in all their relations with the special staff, with the troops, and with each other.

c. Keeps the commander informed of the enemy situation and of the situation of the command as to location, strength, morale, training, equipment, supply, and general effectiveness.

d. Prepares an estimate of the situation when called for.

e. Represents the commander during his temporary absence or when authorized to do so. In certain regiments and certain battalions, the second in command is designated by Tables of Organization as executive and succeeds automatically to the command when the commander ceases to function.

f. Obtains basic decisions from the commander and takes the following action:

(1) Makes necessary decisions supplementary thereto and gives necessary instructions to the staff in furtherance of the basic decisions of the commander.

(2) Allots the detailed work of preparing plans and orders, obtains drafts of plans and orders from the four staff sections, and submits to the commander a completed plan developed from the section plans.

g. Reviews and coordinates all instructions that are to be published to the command and assures himself that they are strictly in accord with policies and plans of the commander.

h. By personal observation and through the four staff sections, sees that the orders and instructions of the commander are executed.

i. Makes a continuous study of the situation with a view to being prepared for future contingencies.

j. Assembles the routine staff section reports and, after their approval by the commander, forwards copies to higher headquarters.

14. The deputy chief of staff (in army and higher units only).—The relations of the deputy chief of staff to other memers of the staff and to the troops are similar to those of the chief of staff. The deputy chief of staff assists the chief of staff and acts for the latter in his absence.

15. The secretary of the general staff (in army and higher units only).—The duties of the secretary of the general staff are—

a. To act as executive officer for the chief of staff and deputy chief of staff.

b. To maintain an office of temporary record for the chief of staff and deputy chief of staff.

c. To route papers received in the office of the chief of staff to their proper destinations.

d. To forward to their destinations in the headquarters all papers emanating from or returning from consideration by the general staff of the command and to establish a follow-up system to insure prompt action on and return of papers.

e. To receive officials visiting headquarters for the purpose of conferring with the commander or with the chief of staff or deputy chief of staff.

f. To collect statistical data for the commander, chief of staff, and deputy chief of staff.

16. The personnel section.—In brigades, regiments, and battalions, the personnel section is represented by the adjutant. It is charged with general staff functions which relate to the personnel of the command as individuals and therefore is brought closely in contact with the following agencies: The Adjutant General's Department, the Inspector General's Department, the Chaplains, the Judge Advocate General's Department, the Medical Department, the Provost Marshal, and the Headquarters Commandant. It is charged specifically with the supervision of activities concerning—

a. Classification, reclassification, assignment, promotion, transfer, retirement, and discharge of all personnel.

b. Replacement of personnel in accordance with priorities formulated by the operations and training section.

c. Decorations, citations, honors, and awards.

d. Leaves of absence and furloughs.

e. Reward, discipline, and punishment.

f. Sanitation and sanitary inspections.

g. Headquarters arrangements.

h. Military government.

i. Postal service.
j. Military police relations with military personnel and civilians.

k. Location of straggler line and collecting points for stragglers and disposition of stragglers.

l. The furnishing of information to the supply section as to the amount and location of shelter necessary for the command and for the activities under its supervision. Administration of quartering areas.

m. Morale and welfare including religious, recreational, and welfare work, and nonmilitary agencies devoted to such work, except that all programs of time are arranged in agreement with the operations and training section.

n. Reports concerning and the handling of prisoners of war and enemy civilians. Questions concerning our prisoners of war in hands of enemy.

o. Strength reports and graphs, casualty reports, station lists, and other personnel statistics. For the duties in this connection of the adjutant of brigades and lower units see paragraph 24 a (6), (7), (8), (9), and (10).

p. General regulations and routine administration which especially concern individuals, or routine not specifically assigned to another staff section.

q. Preparation of such parts of administrative orders or instructions as relate to the personnel section.

17. The military intelligence section.—In brigades and lower units the military intelligence section is represented by the intelligence officer. It is charged, in general, with the collection and evaluation of information concerning the enemy and the dissemination of the resulting military intelligence. Its primary function is to keep the commander and all others concerned informed regarding the enemy's situation and probable intentions. It maintains close liaison with the intelligence sections of higher, lower, and adjacent units, with the air officer in arranging for aerial reconnaissance, and with the engineer in arranging for suitable maps. It performs the following specific duties:

a. Collects information concerning—

(1) Enemy's front line or nearest elements (identity and location).

(2) Enemy's strength, disposition, and movements.
(3) Enemy's supply and equipment (including supply system and installations).

(4) Enemy's operations.

(5) Enemy's casualties, including prisoners.

(6) Enemy's organization of the ground.

(7) Terrain as it affects the enemy.

(8) Enemy's knowledge of our situation.

(9) Enemy's resources, characteristics of his people, and methods of combat. (GHQ only.)

b. Evaluates the information obtained by critical and systematic analysis for the purpose of determining its probable accuracy, significance, and importance.

c. Disseminates the military intelligence obtained to all concerned.

da. Supervises and coordinates the training and activities of all intelligence personnel, in agreement with operations and training section.

d. Supervises radio intercept and goniometric activities.

e. Supervises and coordinates the measures necessary to prevent enemy agents from gaining information.

g. Prepares rules for the regulation of the activities of observers, press correspondents, and civilians who may be attached to the unit.

h. Determines the need for military maps and surveys for general military purposes; determines the general character of such maps as are to be produced; prepares schedules of distribution; supervises map reproduction and distribution.

i. Supervises the preparation and use of codes and ciphers and the solution of enemy secret communication.

j. Prepares rules for and controls operations of censorship.

k. Makes translations.

l. Formulates plans for and coordinates and supervises the dissemination of information to the public.

m. Inaugurates necessary measures to combat enemy propaganda and prepares publicity material and arranges for its distribution among enemy troops and in enemy territory as directed by higher authority.

1Ordinarily not the duty of intelligence officers of units below the army, unless such units are acting independently.

2Ordinarily not the duty of intelligence officers of units below an army corps, unless such units are acting independently.
n. Maintains liaison with other intelligence agencies of the Government and duly accredited foreign attachés and missions.

o. Receives and conducts visitors. (See par. 15 e.)

18. The operations and training section.—In brigades and lower units the operations and training section is represented by the plans and training officer. It is charged, in general, with those functions of the staff which relate to organization, training, and operations. From the nature of its duties, it must maintain the closest cooperation and collaboration with the other staff sections. It confers directly with the commanders of all combat arms and technical units within the command, with the commanders of supporting units, and with the commanders of other units with which the command may be associated. One of its most important duties is to arrange the details for coordination of effort and employment in combat of the combined arms. To this end full use is made of the expert advice and assistance of the commanders of artillery, Air Corps, and engineer troops, and of other special staff officers such as the signal or communication officer. When necessary, these officers are called upon for plans, special maps, reports, or annexes to field orders. In this manner full advantage is taken of the detailed technical knowledge of these officers while at the same time causing their plans to harmonize with the general plan of action and the employment of the other arms and services. It performs the following specific duties:

a. Prepares plans for, secures approval thereof, and supervises—

(1) Mobilization of the command.
(2) Organization and equipment of combat units.
(3) Training, including—
   (a) Selection of training sites.
   (b) Preparation of training programs and orders.
   (c) Organization and conduct of schools.
   (d) Rendition of training reports and maintenance of records of training.
(4) Attachment of units for tactical operations.
(5) Movement of combat troops.
(6) Tactical dispositions of combat troops, including the allotment of quartering areas.
(7) Security measures, reconnaissance, and maintenance of lateral communication in combat.
(8) Liaison with adjacent units.

b. Keeps informed of and studies—

(1) Location, effective strength, and morale of combat troops.
(2) Needs for replacements and reinforcements.
(3) State of equipment and supplies.
(4) Enemy situation.
(5) Adaptability of terrain to combat operations.
(6) Instructions, tactical plans, and field orders received from higher or adjacent units.

c. Prepares field orders and, when approved, is responsible for their timely delivery to the troops; prepares estimates of the situation and plans for combat when required.
d. Recommends priorities for the assignment of replacements and equipment.
e. Supervises the system of signal communication.
f. Keeps in touch by personal visits with the commanders of subordinate combat units and with commanders of attached units and technical troops. Personally, or by means of assistants, maintains direct observation of combat operations and troop movements.
g. Makes a continuous study of the situation in order to be prepared for contingencies that may arise and to recommend such changes in attack formations or combat methods as may be necessary.
h. Keeps the diary of the unit.

19. The supply section.—In brigades, regiments, and battalions, the supply section is represented by S-4. In some organizations there is a separate staff officer for S-4 duties, in others the duties of S-4 are performed by the unit supply officer who also commands the service company, battery, or detachment of the unit. The supply section is charged, in general, with all supply arrangements. It keeps in constant touch with the operations and training section so as to keep informed of changes in the tactical or strategical situation which will necessitate changes in the supply arrangements or in the traffic circulation and control. It is responsible for the assurance of such supply arrangements as will accord the utmost freedom of action to the command. It is charged specifically with the supervision of activities concerning—
a. Procurement in the theater of operations, storage, and distribution of all supplies including ammunition and animals.
b. Transportation by land and water, including the operation of such ports of embarkation and debarkation and necessary auxiliaries as lie in the theater of operations of the unit concerned, and the control of which is not held by the zone of the interior.

c. Highway circulation and control of traffic therein; circulation maps.

d. Recommendations as to the new types of equipment with concurrence of operations and training section.

e. Procurement of real estate, shelter, and facilities, including their leasing, repair, maintenance, and disposition.

f. Construction of facilities relating to supply, shelter, transportation, and hospitalization, but exclusive of fortifications.

g. Preparation and distribution of administrative instructions and administrative orders pertaining to field operations.

h. Hospitalization and evacuation of men and animals, including nonmilitary agencies such as the Red Cross, or parts of such agencies, as may be wholly devoted to hospital and medical relief work.

i. Utilities.

j. Assignment and movement of supply, technical, and labor troops not employed as combat troops. Orders for movement of these troops are issued or controlled by the operations and training section.

k. Salvage and burial.

l. Collection and disposition of captured animals and matériel.

m. Property responsibility and accountability.

n. Funds, and priority of expenditure of same.

o. Tonnage.

p. Continual study of the situation so as to be ready to meet prospective or emergency changes with adequate supply arrangements.

20. Records, reports, and maps.—a. Office of record.—The office of the adjutant general is the office of record for the headquarters. Each staff section keeps temporarily copies of such documents as are required in the transaction of its business.

b. Journals.—(1) In divisions and higher units each staff section keeps a journal of its activities. This journal contains briefs or references to important written or verbal messages sent or received and notation of reports, orders, and similar matter pertaining to the section. Copies of important papers sent or received are filed as supporting documents with the journal.

(2) In brigades and lower units it is not necessary for each section to keep a separate journal, but all may be combined in one “unit journal” kept by the adjutant or plans and training officer, as directed by the unit commander.

(3) As the journal is the permanent record of the operations of the unit, entries should be made immediately as the events occur. Original entries should not be altered, but may be supplemented by later entries if necessary.

c. Situation maps.—(1) In divisions and higher units, each staff section keeps a situation map constantly up to date showing graphically thereon such data as pertain to the activities of the section.

(2) In brigades and lower units, it is usually not necessary for each section to keep a separate situation map, but the data from each section are entered on one map usually kept under the supervision of the unit executive.

d. Operations maps and circulation maps.—These maps, prepared by the third and fourth sections, respectively, are issued when required.

e. Reports.—(1) In divisions and higher units, each staff section prepares and submits such periodic or special reports pertaining to its activities as may be required. A situation report is usually prepared at stated intervals and furnished other sections of the staff and higher headquarters for their information.

(2) In brigades and lower units, a single unit report prepared under the supervision of the executive is usually all that is required.

(3) Every effort should be made to hold to the minimum the number of written reports required from subordinate units. Wherever possible, personal or telephone conference should be used in place of a written report.

f. Diary.—(1) The diary is a brief synopsis of the activities of the entire unit for the day and is submitted in the space provided on the Basic Strength Return (W. D., A. G. O. Form No. 73).

(2) The diary is not intended as a complete history of the activities of the unit in detail. Its purpose is to convey to higher commanders a summary of the principal events for the day, which, taken in conjunction with the strength return, should contain the basis for a brief but accurate analysis of the condition of the unit.

(3) The diary will, for units smaller than the army, be sent to the next superior in duplicate who will examine and sign the original and forward it, together with any remarks that may be necessary, direct to The Adjutant General. A copy of the diary will be retained for file except in the case of a battalion which is serving under regimental control when the copy will be forwarded to regimental headquarters for file.

21. Preparation of combat orders.—In formulating and working up plans and orders for combat operations, each section of the general staff group proceeds along the following lines:

a. Furnishes information and data within the province of the section and bearing on the situation to the chief of staff or executive for the attention of the commander.

b. Receives the commander's decision and any special instructions from the chief of staff or executive.

c. Gives information relative to the plan and any special instructions on matters within the province of the section to the special staff officers concerned and calls for their recommendations.

d. Takes steps to procure necessary additional information by personal reconnaissance or other means.

e. Receives the recommendations of the special staff officers concerned.

f. Coordinates the recommendations received and the data at hand.

g. Drafts that part of the plan or order which pertains to its functions and turns it over to the operations and training section for field orders or the supply section for administrative orders. The third section and fourth section are responsible for completing, submitting for approval, and issuing after approval, field and administrative orders, respectively. In the preparation of orders, the staff officer in many situations must work quickly as well as accurately. Time is often a vital factor. One of the ideals of successful staff work is to provide troops in the field necessary accurate orders in sufficient time to permit subordinate commanders to carry them out without delaying the movement or activities of the troops concerned.
h. Prepares and issues supplementary orders within the province of the section to insure proper execution of the plan.

i. Inspects to insure that so much of the order as applies to matters within the province of the section is understood, and executed in conformity with the commander's will.

j. Records the results and draws lessons therefrom on matters within the province of the section.

SECTION III

FUNCTIONS OF THE SPECIAL STAFF

22. Relations with subordinate units.—a. It is a fundamental principle of command that the commander of any military organization is in full control of all personnel assigned thereto, and is alone responsible to higher authority for the results obtained by his organization.

b. In accordance with this principle, special staff officers, although charged in the following paragraphs with certain duties and functions which apply to the unit as a whole, must remember that these duties and functions are primarily the responsibility of unit commanders, and any directions or instructions issued subordinate units must be transmitted through the proper channels of command and not directly from one special staff officer to the corresponding special staff officer in a subordinate unit. (See pars. 6 c and 9.)

23. Special staff of divisions and higher units.—a. Adjutant general.—The duties of the adjutant general are—

(1) The handling of all official correspondence, except that pertaining to combat orders and instructions, in accordance with regulations and approved policies. In cases for which no policy has been established, he initiates action to secure a policy covering such cases.

(2) Authentication and distribution of all orders and instructions, except those pertaining to combat operations.

(3) Maintenance of the office of record for the headquarters.

(4) Operation of the Army Postal Service.

(5) Operations, in accordance with approved policies, of activities at the headquarters pertaining to—

(a) The classification of all individuals joining the command, their subsequent assignment, reclassification, and reassignment, their promotion, transfer, retirement, and discharge.
(b) Procurement and replacement of personnel.
(c) Decorations, citations, honors, and awards.
(d) Leaves of absence and furloughs.
(e) Education, recreation, and welfare, exclusive of religious matters.

(6) Custody of the records of all personnel belonging to the command which are not kept in some subordinate unit.
(7) Preparation and distribution of the station list.
(8) Preparation and submission of reports on strength, casualties, captured matériel, prisoners of war, and incidental returns.
(9) Supplying of blank forms, publications, and instructional matter furnished by the Adjutant General's Department.
(10) Operation of a general "follow-up" system for the headquarters as regards administrative matters, including recommendations as to similar arrangements in headquarters of subordinate units.

b. Inspector.—The duties of the inspector are—
(1) Inspections other than tactical, including money accounts and property.
(2) Investigations.

(c. Judge advocate.—The duties of the judge advocate are—
(1) Adviser to the commander and other members of the command, in proper cases, on questions of law.
(2) Supervision of the administration of military justice within the command.
(3) Review and recommendation as to the action to be taken upon the proceedings of military courts.

d. Officer in charge of civil affairs (GHQ and other territorial commands when required).—The duties of the officer in charge of civil affairs are—
(1) Adviser to the commander and the staff on matters pertaining to the administration of civil affairs in occupied territory.
(2) Handling for the commander in accordance with his orders, regulations, or approved policies, matters in connection with such military supervision or control of civil affairs as is necessary in the territory occupied by the command.
(3) Supervision within limits prescribed by the commander of civil affairs in subordinate territorial commands.

e. Finance officer.—The duties of the finance officer are—
(1) Payment of the command.
(2) Payment for supplies purchased or requisitioned, and for damages or claims.
(3) Payment for labor hired.
(4) Audit of property accounts.
(5) Custody and disbursement of all Government funds, including such special funds pertaining to the headquarters as the commander directs.
(6) Custody of financial records.
(7) Adviser to the commander and the staff on fiscal matters.
f. Chemical officer.—The duties of the chemical officer are—
(1) Adviser to the commander and the staff on matters pertaining to chemical warfare.
(2) Supervision, within limits prescribed by the commander, of all chemical warfare training.
(3) The collection of information concerning methods of utilization of chemical substance, the results obtained therefrom, and the nature thereof.
(4) Supply of chemical warfare equipment and supplies, except chemically filled ammunition.
(5) Supervision of the salvage and repair of chemical warfare equipment.
g. Chaplain.—The duties of the chaplain are—
(1) Adviser in all religious and moral activities of the command.
(2) Supervision of the spiritual welfare of the command.
(3) The conduct of religious services, including funeral services.
(4) Spiritual ministrations to the sick and wounded.
(5) Correspondence with relatives of deceased officers and enlisted men.
(6) Coordination of the religious work of the various welfare societies.
(7) In the theater of operations in the absence of graves registration personnel, the coordination of the preparation of records and reports of burials and inventories of personal effects of deceased members of the command.
(8) The following additional duties pertain only to the chaplains of divisions and higher units:
(a) Supervision and coordination, within limits prescribed by the commander, of the work of the chaplains of subordinate units.
(b) Recommendations as to assignments and transfers of chaplains.

c) Provision of the services of chaplains for units not specifically provided with a chaplain by Tables of Organization.

h. Chief of artillery (artillery commander in the division).—The duties of the chief of artillery or artillery commander are—

1. Commander of the artillery not assigned or attached to subordinate units.

2. Tactical and technical adviser to the commander and the staff on the use of artillery, including dispositions for antiaircraft defense.

3. Preparation of plans for the use of artillery, including recommendations for its allotment to lower units.

4. Liaison with the artillery of higher, lower, and neighboring units.

5. Allocation and distribution of ammunition for the artillery of lower units.

6. Coordination, within limits prescribed by the commander, of the utilization of artillery in subordinate units.

7. Preparation of plans for use of air observation for artillery.

i. Air officer (chief of aviation in corps and army).—The duties of the air officer or chief of aviation are—

1. Command of the Air Corps troops not assigned or attached to subordinate units.

2. Tactical and technical adviser to the commander and the staff on all Air Corps matters.

3. Preparation of plans for the use of Air Corps troops, including recommendations for their allotment to lower units.

4. Supply of Air Corps equipment and supplies.

5. Procurement and operation of Air Corps storage, maintenance, and repair facilities.

6. Coordination, within limits prescribed by the commander, of the utilization of Air Corps troops in subordinate units.

j. Engineer.—The duties of the engineer are—

1. Command of the engineer troops not assigned or attached to subordinate units.

2. Tactical and technical adviser to the commander and the staff on engineer and fortification matters.

3. Preparation of plans for the use of engineer troops, including recommendations for their allotment to lower units.
(4) Supply of engineer equipment and supplies.
(5) In the theater of operations, construction, repair, and maintenance of roads, bridges, and structures.
(6) In the theater of operations, construction, repair, maintenance, and operation of railways, portable and fixed electric-light plants, water-supply systems, and all other utilities of general service not otherwise assigned.
(7) Military mining, demolitions, and removal of obstacles.
(8) Surveys, mapping, and the procurement, production, and distribution of maps.
(9) Collection of information needed in engineer operations.
(10) Recommendations as to traffic regulations required on roads or bridges due to their physical condition.
(11) Preparation and posting of signs for marking routes.
(12) Supervision, within limits prescribed by the commander, of engineer and camouflage activities in subordinate units, including such work performed by troops other than engineers.

k. Signal officer.—The duties of the signal officer are—
(1) Command, in so far as relates to operations, of signal troops not assigned or attached to subordinate units.
(2) Adviser to the commander and the staff on signal matters.
(3) Preparation of signal operation instructions and signal annexes.
(4) Supply of signal equipment and supplies.
(5) Procurement and operation of signal maintenance and minor repair facilities.
(6) Technical inspection of signal equipment within limits prescribed by the commander and recommendations relative to its care and utilization.
(7) Technical supervision, within limits prescribed by the commander, of all signal operations of the command, including training, assignment, replacement, and utilization of signal and communication personnel of units.
(8) Supervision of the installation, maintenance, and operation of the signal communication system, including the message center, of the unit.
(9) Supervision of the meteorological activities and of the photographic work for historical purposes within the unit.
(10) Operation of the signal intelligence service, including all activities connected with the preparation and revision of codes and ciphers; the preparation and detection of secret inks; the interception of enemy radio and wire communication and goniometric work incident thereto; the solution of enemy codes and ciphers. Signal intelligence sections are not ordinarily assigned to units below a field army unless such units are acting independently.

1. Headquarters commandant.—Normally the commanding officer of special troops is the headquarters commandant. In the division the commanding officer of special troops is the headquarters commandant and provost marshal.

   (1) As headquarters commandant, his duties are—
      (a) Technical training and operation of the headquarters detachment and headquarters company (troops).
      (b) Safety and internal administration of the headquarters.
      (c) Arrangements for the moves of the headquarters.
      (d) Detail of orderlies and messengers.
      (e) Supervision of headquarters mess.
      (f) Messing and quartering of casualties.
      (g) Supervision of headquarters garage and stables.

   (2) As commanding officer of special troops, he is responsible for administration and discipline of all special troops.

m. Provost marshal.—The duties of the provost marshal are—

   (1) Command of the military police organizations not assigned or attached to subordinate units.
   (2) Enforcement of traffic-control regulations.
   (3) Apprehension and disposition of stragglers, absentees, and deserters, including recommendations as to location of straggler lines.
   (4) Collection, evacuation, and custody of prisoners of war, including recommendations as to location of collecting points and inclosures, and the operation of a prisoner of war information bureau when necessary.
   (5) Maintenance of order and enforcement of police regulations among members of the military forces and in areas occupied by troops.
   (6) Cooperation with allied or civil police authorities when necessary.
   (7) Control of enemy civilians and of civil population when necessary.
   (8) Criminal investigation activities.
   (9) Control of circulation of individuals.

123255°—32—3
(10) Supervision of feeding of civilian population when necessary.

(11) Coordination, within limits prescribed by the commander, of the utilization of military police in subordinate units.

n. Quartermaster.—The duties of the quartermaster are—

(1) Command, in so far as relates to operations, of quartermaster troops and trains not assigned or attached to subordinate units.

(2) Adviser to the commander and the staff on Quartermaster Corps matters.

(3) Supply of quartermaster equipment and supplies, including animals.

(4) Procurement and disposition of real estate and facilities, including leasing.

(5) Procurement and operation of quartermaster utilities and of quartermaster storage, maintenance, and repair facilities.

(6) Installation and operation of the salvage service.

(7) Operation of the Graves Registration Service.

(8) Transportation of troops and supplies by land and water, except such as may be allocated to another service.

(9) Technical inspection of motor and animal transportation and supervision, within limits prescribed by his commander, of quartermaster activities in subordinate units.

(10) Procurement of quartering space and shelter for the headquarters and for the entire command.

o. Surgeon.—The duties of the surgeon are—

(1) Command of the Medical Department troops not assigned or attached to subordinate units.

(2) Technical adviser to the commander and the staff on all matters pertaining to the health and sanitation of the command or of occupied territory; the care and disposition of sick and injured; the location and utilization of Medical Department units and establishments; the training of Medical Department troops; and the training of all troops in hygiene and first aid.

(3) Supply of medical, dental, and veterinary equipment and supplies.

(4) Operation of hospitals and other Medical Department establishments and of an evacuation service.

(5) Supervision, within limits prescribed by his commander, over the operations of elements of his service in subordinate units.
(6) Administration pertaining to casualty and other reports and records and personnel of the Medical Department.

p. Ordnance officer.—The duties of the ordnance officer are—
(1) Command, in so far as relates to operations, of ordnance troops not assigned or attached to subordinate units.
(2) Adviser to the commander and the staff in ordnance matters.
(3) Supply of ammunition as far forward as the refilling points, and other ordnance equipment and supplies.
(4) Operation of ordnance storage, maintenance, and repair facilities, including salvage and repair of ordnance matériel.
(5) Technical inspection of ordnance equipment.
(6) Supervision, within limits prescribed by his commander, of ordnance activities in subordinate units.
(7) The collection of information concerning ordnance matériel.

24. Special staff of brigades, regiments, and battalions.—
a. Adjutant, chaplain, and surgeon.—These officers have duties similar to those outlined in paragraph 23a, g, and o.

b. Munitions officer.—(1) The duties of the munitions officer are—
(a) Responsibility for the requisition, receipt, and distribution of ammunition (including pyrotechnics), and for keeping the ammunition records and reports.
(b) By frequent inspections to keep himself informed concerning the supply of ammunition throughout the unit.
(2) In railway artillery units this officer is called “the railway and munitions officer,” and in addition to the above duties supervises the rail movements of his unit.

c. Personnel adjutant.—The duties of the personnel adjutant are—
(1) Responsibility for keeping the personnel records pertaining to all enlisted men of the unit.
(2) When directed by the commander, he acts as agent of the division finance officer in the payment of troops.
(3) When the unit enters the combat zone, he becomes the custodian of all funds of subordinate combat units.

d. Reconnaissance officer.—The duties of the reconnaissance officer are—
(1) Reconnaissance for routes and positions.
(2) Organization and operation of observation posts.
(3) Performance of topographical operations necessary for establishing the unit in position.

e. Communication officer.—The duties of the communication officer are—

(1) Command of the communication section or platoon of the headquarters company of his unit. He is responsible for its technical training and functioning.

(2) Adviser to the commander and the staff on matters relating to signal communication, including the location of command posts.

(3) Establishment and operation of the signal communication system, including the message center, for which his unit commander is directly responsible.

f. Supply officer (in some organizations the commander of the service troops also serves as S-4 and as the unit supply officer).—The duties of the supply officer are—

(1) Such of the duties regarding the procurement and distribution of supplies of all classes, listed in paragraph 23, as pertain to the lower unit and are not specifically charged to some other staff officer.

(2) Keeping prescribed records regarding supplies and equipment of the unit.

g. Attached technical specialists.—The commanders of attached chemical warfare, artillery, Air Corps, or engineer troops act as tactical and technical advisers to the commander and staff on matters pertaining to their arm or service with duties similar to those outlined in paragraph 23 f, h, i, and j.

SECTION I

GENERAL INFORMATION ON ESTIMATE OF THE SITUATION, ORDERS, AND ANNEXES

25. General.—The art of properly framing orders so as to insure effective action by subordinates is an important feature in the exercise of command. Effective orders are the result of clear thinking, definite decisions, and clear, straightforward language designed to translate the decision into action.

26. Classification of orders.—Orders are divided into two general classes; routine orders and combat orders.

   a. Routine orders include general orders, court-martial orders, special orders, bulletins, circulars, and memoranda. For regulations governing such orders see AR 310-50.

   b. Combat orders are orders of any type which contain instructions for subordinate units pertaining to any phase of operations in the field.

27. Estimate of the situation (par. 38).—a. Before attempting to draft a combat order, the commander must first make an estimate of the situation in which he considers the main factors affecting the operations of his command and arrives at a definite decision as to his plan of action. Such an estimate may be merely a brief mental review of the situation, or it may be a carefully prepared written document, but in any case an estimate in some form is an essential preliminary to every combat order.
b. In a general way, any commander making an estimate of the situation follows in his train of thought the sequence outlined below:

(1) Mission.—He considers the mission assigned to him by higher authority or deduced by him from the instructions from that source.

(2) Relative strength.—He considers the factors affecting the combat strength of his own and the enemy's forces and makes a comparison of such factors; from this comparison he deduces the relative combat strength of the opposing forces.

(3) Enemy intentions.—He fully considers the probable enemy mission and the plans open to the enemy as they may be deduced from the enemy's dispositions relative to his own, from the enemy's relative combat strength, and from the enemy's probable knowledge of his opponent's situation and intentions. A deduction of the enemy's probable intentions is also made for use in the consideration of plans to be adopted.

(4) Possible plans.—He fully considers the plans open to himself in view of his mission, the existing tactical situation, and his strength and dispositions as compared with those of the enemy.

(5) Decision.—Having considered the above points, he formulates, in general terms only, the plan he adopts. This is his decision. It is arrived at as a result of the analyses and comparisons as outlined above. He should so express his decision that it will serve as a basis of action for the command as a whole and as a directive for the preparation of the order putting the plan into execution.

28. Types of combat orders.—Based upon their form and special uses, combat orders may be classified as follows:

a. Field orders.—Field orders are orders given by a commander setting forth the situation, the tactical mission, his decision and plan of action, and such details as to method of execution as will insure coordinated action by the whole command. They are designed to bring about a course of action, in accordance with the intention of the leader, suited to the situation and to insure full cooperation between all units, arms, and services. The well written order is brief and to the point but contains all information and directions essential to the tactical operations of the arms.

b. Letters of instruction.—At the beginning of operations and from time to time thereafter, plans of the superior leaders, including usually those of the War Department, GHQ, or a group of armies, are communicated in the form of letters of instruction. These letters regulate movements over large areas and for considerable periods of time. They deal with the broader phases of operations and are generally confined to stating the mission and prescribing the part each major unit is to play in its attainment.

o. Warning orders.—A warning order is a field order issued as a preliminary to an order which is to follow. It may take the form of a message or of a formal order and may be written or oral. The conditions involved in each situation determine whether a warning order is necessary or desirable, and its form. When it simply gives advance information in order to permit commanders to prepare to execute a subsequent order, it is given by means of an oral or written message to the commanders concerned. When it directs specific activity on the part of certain subordinate units, it is usually issued in the form of a field order.

d. Movement orders.—Movement orders are issued only by the corps and army, never by divisions or lower units. They direct movements of corps and army troops, especially such movements as are not involved directly in a combat mission. Occasionally they are used by the corps and army to direct the movement of divisions in back areas. They should be short and supplemented by movement or march tables.

e. Administrative orders.—Administrative orders are employed to cover the administrative details and the supply plans for operations. They outline the operations of the several technical, supply, and administrative services, coordinate their activities, and transmit to the command the commander’s plan of administration. They are used when the instructions regarding such matters as supply, evacuation, traffic, trains, and other administrative matters are too voluminous to be embodied in paragraph 4 of the field order, or at other times when it becomes necessary to publish administrative instructions of this character to the command. They are usually issued only by divisions and higher units.

29. Formal field orders.—a. Sequence.—In order to enable the will of the commander to be understood promptly and unmistakably, to insure that all essential instructions are covered, and to facilitate reference, a standard sequence for all field orders is prescribed. This sequence divides the field order into the following principal parts:

Heading.
Distribution of troops (in certain orders only).
Body.
Ending.

(1) The heading contains the title; the place, date, and hour of issue; the number of the order; and reference to the map or maps used.

(a) The title is the official designation of the command; as, 5th Division, VI Corps, Second Army. It may, where circumstances require, be shown by a code name.

(b) If the need for secrecy requires it, the place of issue is omitted.

(c) The date is written in sequence; day, month, and year.

(d) The hour given in the heading is the hour when the order is signed.

(e) Field orders of a command are numbered consecutively for the period of the war. If two or more are issued on the same day they are given separate numbers.

(f) The map reference designates the maps required, giving the scale and the names of sheets and the year of the edition (where necessary), in sufficient detail to identify the exact maps used in the preparation of the order.

(2) The distribution of troops shows the tactical components into which the command is divided (advance guard, main body, etc.) and the troops assigned to each. Its use is generally limited to march and outpost orders and to the first field order issued by a newly created command. When a distribution of troops is used, it is headed TROOPS and follows paragraph 2 of the order, without number, or is placed on the left of the body occupying about one-third of the page. The tactical components are marked with lettered subheads a, b, c, etc., the troops listed under each performing the task prescribed in the correspondingly marked subparagraphs of paragraph 3 of the order.

(3) The body of the field order contains information and instructions for the command and is divided into five paragraphs as follows, each containing one of the five essentials of every field order:
Paragraph 1. Information.
2. The decision and general plan.
3. Tactical instructions to subordinate units.
4. Administrative instructions.
5. Provisions for the maintenance of signal communication.

(a) Paragraph 1 contains such information of the enemy and of friendly troops as subordinates should know in order that they may cooperate effectively in the performance of their assigned tasks. It is devoted exclusively to information and contains no part of the plan or instructions of the commander. It is usually divided into two lettered subparagraphs: a, information of the enemy; and b, information of friendly troops. The amount of information to be included must be carefully determined. If too verbose, important information is lost in a mass of unimportant detail, and if too brief, information essential for the effective action of subordinates may be omitted. A distinction should be made between information based on established fact and that which is based on conjecture.

(b) Paragraph 2 contains the general plan of the commander or so much thereof as embodies his decision and general plan for the employment of the command as a whole to meet the immediate situation. The amount of detail given in this paragraph is sufficient to insure a clear comprehension on the part of subordinates as to what, in general, is to be accomplished by the force as a whole. It will include, when appropriate, certain details applicable to the command as a whole which are necessary to coordinate the action of subordinate units; e. g., the main objective, time of movement, line of departure, direction of movement, zone of action for the whole command, and the boundaries between subordinate units.

(c) Paragraph 3 gives a definite task to each of the several combatant fractions of the command in order to carry out the main plan outlined in paragraph 2. These tasks are given under as many lettered subparagraphs, a, b, c, etc., as may be necessary to assign one subparagraph to each tactical unit to which instructions are given. The leading unit or the one having the most important duty to perform is usually considered first. The complete task of each subordinate unit with its zone of action or location and its scheme of maneuver or mission is embodied in its lettered subparagraph. The amount of detail to be given in this paragraph depends upon the situation.
The order should not trespass upon the province of the subordinate. The general rule is that the commander of each subordinate unit should be told what he is to accomplish, but not how to do it. A final subparagraph of paragraph 3, always lettered x, contains general instructions applicable to two or more elements of the command which do not properly belong elsewhere.

(d) Paragraph 4 contains administrative instructions. In commands smaller than a division, this paragraph usually contains all necessary information or instructions pertaining to trains, ration and ammunition distributing points, refilling points, collecting and aid stations, or other administrative matters. In divisions and higher units, these instructions are usually so voluminous as to require the issuance of a separate administrative order. When an administrative order is issued, paragraph 4 of the field order is merely a reference to the administrative order, together with such special administrative details as affect immediately and directly the tactical dispositions of subordinate combat units.

(e) Paragraph 5 contains instructions providing for the maintenance of signal communication. This requires that the following be included when appropriate:

1. Brief reference to the signal communication annex (if any) or to the index of signal operation instructions.
2. Axes of signal communication for the issuing commander's unit and for the principal next subordinate units.
3. Command posts of the issuing commander and of the principal next subordinate commanders.

(4) The ending contains the signature, authentication, a list of annexes, if any, and a statement showing the distribution given the order.

(a) Field orders are signed by the commander in person or by his principal staff assistant. Copies of the order are authenticated by the staff officer who is responsible for the preparation of the order.

(b) The statement showing the distribution is essential in order to insure that the order is distributed to every officer or unit directly concerned with its execution. This statement may be in detail on the order, or a reference made to a standard distribution list (e.g., "Distribution A") already adopted, which shows in detail the distribution used. Each copy of a combat order is usually numbered, and a record is kept showing the specific copy numbers distributed to each officer or unit.

b. Method of issue.—(1) In active operations field orders frequently will be issued in fragmentary form as messages or oral orders, especially by commanders of smaller units; but however issued, the matter contained therein should, whenever possible, follow the sequence prescribed above.

(2) The field orders of divisions and higher units are almost invariably written. When conditions demand that oral orders be issued, written orders confirming those issued orally follow as soon as practicable. The field orders of brigades and regiments are usually written or dictated; those of lower units dictated or oral. (Par. 34.)

30. Annexes to field orders.—a. Annexes giving details are employed to amplify the field orders of divisions and higher units whenever the detailed instructions are too long to be included in the field order. Annexes to the same field order are numbered serially and reference is made to them in the proper paragraph of the order. Even when accompanied by annexes, the field order should contain within itself all information and instructions essential to the general coordination of the elements of the command. If an annex should be lost, subordinate commanders must know from the order itself the prescribed teamwork of the various arms.

b. Annexes, when necessary, are prepared by the appropriate staff officers or subordinate commanders and submitted to the commander for approval prior to issue. They are signed by the chief of staff and authenticated by the appropriate assistant chief of staff. The following are types of annexes that may be required:

(1) Artillery.
(2) Aviation (normally for armies and higher units only).
(3) Machine gun.
(4) Chemical.
(5) Signal communication.
(6) Organization of the ground.
(7) Engineer.
(8) Intelligence.
(9) March tables.
(10) Entraining tables.
(11) Relief tables.
(12) Situation maps.
(13) Operation maps.
(14) Intelligence maps.
(15) Entrucking (detrucking) table.

31. Distribution of orders.—Field orders should be issued in time to give subordinate leaders an opportunity to study the situation and to issue their own instructions. The time required for an order to reach the lowest units charged with its execution depends not only on the size of the unit but also on several other factors, such as the length of the order, the efficiency of the various staffs, the dispersion of subordinate units, the availability of communication, state of the weather, and enemy activity. Careful consideration of these factors shows that it takes considerable time to prepare and distribute orders based on proper reconnaissance and sound estimates of the situation; however, in a moving situation the ideal is to have all orders anticipate the movement or progress of the troops. The infantry battalion commander should receive his order from his regimental commander at least 1 hour and 15 minutes before the time designated for the attack.

32. Technique of orders.—

a. Amount of detail.—The amount of detail in an order depends upon the composition, size, and training of the force for which the orders are issued, the time available, and the situation. When the transmission of orders involves a considerable period of time during which the situation may change, detailed instructions are avoided. The same rule applies when orders may have to be carried out under unforeseen circumstances. In these cases it is better to give general directions, stressing the object to be attained but leaving to subordinate commanders the choice of the means to be employed. Orders attempting to arrange matters too far in advance may have to be recalled and others substituted, thereby causing needless hardships to the troops as well as injury to their morale. When the troops must be engaged quickly without detailed information or reconnaissance, general tasks are assigned subordinates, and detailed instructions are avoided. A combat order should not trespass upon the province of a subordinate.

b. Scheme of maneuver.—(1) All plans of offensive action include a definite scheme of maneuver. Schemes of maneuver contemplate a decisive blow made effective by teamwork, combinations of fire power, shock action, and the utilization of the terrain to the best advantage of all concerned.

(2) It is important that orders for combat convey a clear idea of the scheme of maneuver. This usually requires a statement not only of the movement to be made, but also a statement of the effect to be obtained as a result of the movement. While the giving of lines of departure, zones of action, and directions of attack, or even the locations of troops, indicates generally the scheme of maneuver, it does not necessarily express the effect intended; for example, the scheme of maneuver and effect intended might be expressed as follows: "The 1st Brigade will attack at 2:00 PM, enveloping the hostile right"; or "it will penetrate the hostile position and by flanking action to its right will assist, etc.," or "moving by the ravines A, B, C, etc., it will secure the high ground north of ---, etc."

c. Zones of action.—Zones of action in movement or attack, sectors in a defensive situation, and boundaries between units are described in orders by specifying for each boundary prominent and easily distinguishable features from rear to front (or in retrograde movements from front to rear) and connecting them with dashes. Each terrain feature named must be definitely assigned to a particular unit. This is done in the case of zones of action or sector boundaries by placing the word exclusive or inclusive after the terrain features named, and in the case of boundaries between units by placing in parentheses after the terrain features named the designation of the unit to which they are assigned. For example:

Division zone of action:

East (or right) boundary: TWO TAVERNS—M. FINK—RJ at (361.4-755.7)—NEWCHESTER (all incl).

West (or left) boundary: WHITE RUN (excl)—GRANITE HILL (incl)—knoll at (359.8-757.5) (excl)—OAK GROVE S. H. (incl).

Boundary between brigades: LOW DUTCH ROAD (to 2d Brig)—GULDENS (to 1st Brig)—PINE CHURCH (to 1st Brig).

d. Details of time.—(1) Details of time should be carefully stated in orders, and for purposes of coordination subordinate officers and staff officers must be required to synchronize their watches with the official time kept at headquarters.
(2) Dates are stated by giving the day, month, and year (if necessary), thus: 4 February, 1923. In naming a night, both days should be mentioned, thus: Night 4/5 Feb. 23. To designate "noon" and "midnight" these words are written.

(3) When orders or plans are prepared for an operation that is to take place on a date and at an hour as yet undetermined or concerning which secrecy is essential, the expressions D day and H hour are used to indicate that the date and hour of the operations are to be announced in subsequent orders. For example, Field Orders No. 7 states, "* * * the division attacks on D day at H hour * * * ".

Subsequent orders state, "* * * reference FO No. 7, D day is 15 January; H hour is 5:30 AM * * *". It is then understood that the operation ordered by Field Orders No. 7 is to take place at 5:30 AM, 15 January. When the operations of any element of the command are to commence at some time prior or subsequent to D day or H hour, the time is indicated as D day (or H hour) plus (or minus) so many days (hours or minutes).

e. Details of place.—(1) Details of place should be stated in orders with great care and accuracy.

(2) Expressions depending upon the viewpoint of the observer, such as right, left, in front of, behind, on this side, beyond, etc., are avoided, reference being made to points of the compass instead. The terms right and left, however, may be applied to individuals or bodies of troops, to boundaries of zones or sectors, or to the banks of a stream; in the latter case, the observer is supposed to be facing downstream; in the other cases, he is facing to the front (direction of enemy).

(3) Geographical names are written or printed in capital letters. This minimizes the chance of error and makes the places mentioned stand out prominently in an order. When the spelling does not conform to the pronunciation, the latter is shown phonetically in parentheses, thus: BICESTER (Bister), GILA (Hela).

(4) When two or more places or features on the map have the same name, they should be distinguished by reference to prominent nearby points, or when maps are provided with grid lines, by giving the coordinates. This should be done whenever any doubt exists. The same rule applies to obscure places or features.
(5) A road is designated by its name as, the "BALTIMORE TURNPIKE," or by connecting two or more names of places on the road with dashes, thus: "the road: LEAVENWORTH-FRENCHMAN-KICKAPOO."

f. Designation of units.—The titles of armies are written in full as First Army; of corps in Roman numerals as, II Corps; of divisions and smaller units in Arabic numerals as, 3d Division, 4th Brigade, etc.

g. Legibility.—Written orders should be so distinct as to be legible even in a bad light. The recipient of the order may have only a candle or a flashlight by which to read it. Care should be taken to see that carbon or mimeographed copies are so distinct as to be easily read.

h. Choice of language.—(1) An order is faulty if it does not convey to the recipient the exact meaning and intention of the author. Vague and ambiguous orders indicate vacillation and the absence of definite decision on the part of a commander. Troops must be told, in terms that are direct and unmistakable, exactly what their leader wants them to do.

(2) Field orders must be brief, clear, and definite. The correct use of plain English is essential. Long involved sentences are seldom effective because they are confusing; short sentences are easily understood. Conjectures, expectations, reasons for measures adopted, and detailed instructions for a variety of possible events should be avoided because they weaken the force of an order and undermine confidence in the commander.

(3) As a rule, an affirmative form of expression is used. Such an order as, "The field train will not accompany the regiment," is defective because the gist of the order depends upon the single word "not." A better form is, "The field train will remain at LEAVENWORTH." No doubt arises in the latter case.

(4) The term "holding attack" is never used as the vigor of an attack might be lessened if the unit knew it was "holding" only. Such expressions as "attempt to capture," "try to hold," "as far as possible," "as well as you can," etc., should be avoided. They tend to divide responsibility between the commander and his subordinates, which is incompatible with command.

i. Use of abbreviations.—Only authorized abbreviations are used in combat orders, and if there is any possibility of their being misunderstood, the words should be spelled out in full. As a rule, abbreviations, except AM, PM, No, RJ, CR, and BM, are used only in messages or orders written by hand or in the heading, ending, or distribution of troops in typed orders. A list of authorized abbreviations and brief information relative to their use are given in Section III of this chapter.

33. Definition of military expressions.—a. The expression "advance on" or "march on" is used when doubt exists as to whether the unit will reach the destination mentioned or when two or more days' marching is necessary. On the other hand, the expression "advance to" or "march to" is used when it is reasonably certain the destination will be reached.

b. The terms "right flank" and "left flank" are fixed designations. They apply primarily to the right and left of a command when facing the enemy and do not change when the command is retreating. The "head" of a column is its leading element, no matter in what direction the column is facing; the other extremity is the "tail."

c. The term "front" always indicates the direction of the enemy, and "rear" the direction away from the enemy.

d. The expression "will clear" means that all elements of the designated organization shall have passed the indicated place. Thus, "The column will clear crossroads 573 by 7:00 AM," means that the tail of the column shall have passed the designated point by the hour indicated. When speaking of the head of the column, "will reach" or "will pass" are used instead of "will clear."

e. The word "precede" means that the leading element regulates its march on a rear element; thus, "The advance guard will precede the main body at 500 yards," means that the main body regulates the march.

f. The word "follow" means that a rear element regulates on an element in front; thus, "The main body will follow the advance guard at 500 yards," means that the advance guard regulates the rate of march.

g. The words "attached to" mean that the unit to which they refer actually comes under the direct orders of the commander of the unit to which attached. For example, "The 1st Field Artillery is attached to the 1st Brigade" means that the artillery regiment is detached temporarily from the tactical control of the artillery brigade commander and comes directly under the orders of the commander of the infantry brigade.
b. The words "will support" or "supported by" mean that the unit affording the support does not come under the direct orders of the commander of the unit supported. Thus, "The 1st Field Artillery will be in direct support of the 1st Brigade" shows the infantry commander to what unit he is to look for artillery support but does not give him any command or control over such artillery.

i. To "screen" conveys the idea of preventing hostile observation of the strength, dispositions, and movements of a command, usually by a detachment therefrom.

j. To "cover" conveys not only the idea of screening and concealing but also of insuring the security of another force or locality.

k. To "secure" means gaining possession of a position or terrain feature with or without force and making such dispositions as will tend to avert any danger of its destruction, obstruction, or loss.

l. To "hold" means to retain possession by force of a position or terrain feature.

m. "To seize" means to gain physical possession of some objective such as a hill, town, or other locality.

n. The "line of departure" is a line designated to coordinate the advance of the combat units before they enter the zone of effective hostile small-arms fire.

o. An "initial point" is a place at which the various subdivisions of a command are required to arrive at the proper time to join a marching column.

34. Dictated and oral orders.—a. Form.—The reasons here-tofore given for adherence to the prescribed sequence and form in written field orders apply even more strongly to orders which are dictated or given orally. Training the mind to follow a logical and systematic method of dealing with the situation is highly important. The written order, before issue, can be corrected, modified, added to, or otherwise changed. This can be done also with dictated or oral orders, but the moment the commander starts to change his dictated or oral orders he opens the door for confusion and misunderstanding, to say nothing of the lack of confidence in him as a commander that is engendered by his apparent indecision and vagueness.

b. Technique.—(1) The formulation of an order which is to be dictated or given orally is a more delicate task than is the case with a written order and requires more practice. No matter what the size of the unit for which issued, dictated and oral orders should follow the prescribed form. The smaller the unit, the more this is necessary in order to prevent the omission of essential details. Care and exactitude in the choice of language are also requisites. Before dictating an order or giving one orally, the commander must have his plan thoroughly crystallized, must know exactly what he is going to say, and the exact language he is going to use. When he has the time, he should block out on paper the various headings and paragraphs of the order, noting the troops to be included in each, and the instructions to be given to each unit. When time does not permit this blocking out on paper, the order should be completely arranged in his mind before he starts to give it; that is, the decision must be made, and the means for carrying that decision into effect must be determined upon before any start is made to issue the order.

(2) Dictated orders are recorded by those who take the dictation. When an order is issued orally, a record of its provisions and terms is made by the commander issuing it and by the subordinates receiving it for inclusion in the journals of their respective units. When important orders are issued orally by a headquarters which customarily issues written field orders, it furnishes to the subordinates receiving the oral orders a copy of the record which it makes for inclusion in its own journal.

35. Administrative orders.—

a. By whom prepared.—The administrative order is prepared by the G-4 section of the general staff. The parts of the order pertaining to the first section are coordinated by G-1, and transmitted to G-4 for incorporation in the order. G-3 is consulted freely in order that there may be complete accord between the tactical and the administrative plans. The administrative order may be amended from time to time by published changes, or a new order may be issued. Administrative orders are issued by armies, corps, divisions, and smaller independent commands.

b. Basis.—(1) Fundamentally, administrative orders are based on—

(a) The plan for the employment of the unit concerned.

(b) The administrative plans of higher headquarters.

(2) To formulate a suitable administrative order, a thorough understanding of the tactical plan is essential. To this end, the officers charged with its preparation must have the entire confidence of the commander and must consult frequently and cooperate constantly with the various staff sections.

(3) In general, the administrative order of the corps or of the division is based upon an army administrative order. The administrative order of the corps is primarily for the use of the corps troops. The division habitually receives direct a copy of all army administrative orders. There is but little in a division order that is based on the corps order, except when the corps has taken over certain phases of supply which are normal to the army, as when the corps is acting independently or is pushed so far to the front that normal supply from army depots is suspended.

c. How and when issued.—The administrative order does not always accompany a field order. It may be a complete order or a note or message giving changes in existing plans. When circumstances require that administrative orders be issued orally they should follow the sequence shown in the form for an administrative order on page 101.

d. Scope.—In general, the administrative order of a division gives the location of railheads; supply establishments; refilling and distributing points for rations, ammunition, and other supplies; hospitals and collecting stations for men; collecting stations for sick and wounded animals; instructions for evacuation of sick and wounded men and animals; instructions for maintenance of roads and for the circulation and restriction of traffic thereon; instructions for salvage and burial; military police; prisoners of war; and the trains. When a division is inexperienced, it may be necessary to include in an administrative order many details which otherwise might not appear. Such details include instructions with reference to replenishing reserve rations, traffic control, police arrangements, disposition of surplus baggage, use of extra trucks, movement of special units, size of quartering parties, and the posting of signs. In a well-trained and experienced division it is apparent that many of the foregoing details may be omitted as they will have become routine through training and through incorporation in standing orders. Detailed instructions to a service of interest to that service alone should be given in the form of a memorandum to the chief of the service concerned and should not be included in the administrative order.
e. References to previous orders.—When there is no change in a portion of an existing plan, an administrative order may refer to a previous order or a subparagraph of the MISCELLANEOUS paragraph may state, "Other administrative details, no change."

f. Delayed orders.—The administrative order usually is prepared in time to accompany a field order. It may be delayed. When it is known that the administrative order will be issued later, certain information contained therein may be given out orally or by memorandum to subordinate commanders and chiefs of services or included in the field order, in order that those officers may not be delayed in the preparation of their own orders. This is particularly true in a meeting engagement when time is limited. By furnishing the brigade commanders with the location of the ammunition distributing points and the collecting station, these officers need not wait for the arrival of the formal administrative order before getting out their own orders.

g. Time required to issue and distribute.—From two to three hours is required to prepare a complete formal administrative order for a division after the tactical plan is known. The usual distribution requires one hour. Hence, an administrative order requires for its preparation and distribution between three and four hours.

h. Signature, authentication, and distribution.—The ending contains the signature and authentication of the order, list of annexes, and a statement of the distribution. The order is signed by the chief of staff and is made official by the assistant chief of staff, G-4. It is important that no agency or officer to whom special instructions have been given in the administrative order is overlooked in its distribution. This is apt to occur unless the order is carefully checked against the distribution list. The order is distributed through the message center, as in the case of the field order.

i. Annexes.—(1) The administrative order may be complete within itself, or, whenever it is necessary to publish details too voluminous for inclusion in the order, any paragraph or subparagraph may be amplified by an annex, such as—

(a) Administrative map.
(b) Circulation map.
(c) Quartermaster plan.
(d) Ammunition plan.
(e) Engineer plan (other than tactical).
(f) Medical plan.
(g) Ordnance plan.
(h) Signal plan (other than tactical).
(i) Aviation (or air force) plan (other than tactical).
(j) Railhead plan.

(2) Corps and division administrative orders rarely are accompanied by (e), (g), (h), and (i).

(3) These annexes are listed at the foot of the order and are referred to in the proper paragraphs.

36. Use of maps with combat orders.—a. The preparation of a combat order, except for very small units, will often consist of planning the operation on a map as far as it is practicable to picture the contemplated operations without confusing the map and then writing the order or delivering it orally with a view to supplementing and amplifying the instruction on the map to the extent necessary to insure clarity, essential cooperation, and teamwork. In such cases, the map or a sketch or overlay giving a graphical picture of the plan should be reproduced and issued with the order, and referred to in the appropriate paragraphs. The written or oral order need not repeat information that is shown on the accompanying or issued map sketch or overlay, except in so far as repetition is necessary to insure clarity and the essential cooperation and teamwork of all elements of the command. Maps are especially useful in field orders and administrative orders and if used properly will greatly increase the clarity of orders while at the same time greatly reducing their length and verbiage.

b. Maps so used with field orders to present a graphical picture of operations are known as "operations maps" and those used with administrative orders to present a graphical picture of administrative features are known as "administrative maps," each being issued as an annex to the order to which it pertains.

SECTION II

FORMS

37. General.—In general, the forms outlined in this section are based on the division, but with the necessary modifications they are suitable for any unit. The amount of detail to be incorporated in any order or form depends upon the situation and somewhat upon the time available. The forms do not cover all situations, nor can every item shown be applied to every situation. In making use of the forms, the units involved, the time available, and the particular situation must be kept in mind, and the details should be incorporated, selected, and modified accordingly. For forms of orders, etc., pertaining to a particular arm, see the field manual for that arm.
38. Forms for estimate of the situation and combat orders.

ESTIMATE OF THE SITUATION

1. MISSION.—State the mission assigned by higher authority or deduced from the instructions from that source.

2. OPPOSING FORCES.

In the subparagraphs under this heading should appear a consideration of the factors affecting the combat strength of the opposing forces and a comparison from which is deduced the relative combat strength.

a. Enemy forces.—Consider the disposition, the numerical strength, combat efficiency (physical condition, morale, training), and composition of the forces of the enemy; the material means, including supply and equipment, at his disposal; and the assistance to be expected from neighboring troops.

b. Own forces.—Consider with respect to your forces the factors corresponding to those considered under a.

c. Relative combat strength.—Compare the considerations in a and b and deduce the relative combat strength of the forces that are likely to be in opposition in your attempt to execute the mission stated in paragraph 1.

3. ENEMY SITUATION.

In the subparagraphs under this heading should appear a full consideration of the enemy's probable mission and plans open to the enemy as they may be deduced from his dispositions relative to yours, from his relative combat strength, and from his probable knowledge of your situation and intentions. A deduction of his probable intentions also is made for use in the consideration of plans open to you.

a. Plans open to the enemy.—State, in general terms only, the plans regarded as open to the enemy deduced as indicated in the introduction to paragraph 3.

b. Analyses of the enemy's plans.—With respect to each plan open to the enemy, determine its practicability and weigh its advantages and disadvantages as viewed by him. Factors which may be considered are relative combat strength of the opposing forces; time required to effect the necessary changes in disposition of his troops to accomplish the plan and, on the part of his opponent, to make troop dispositions to oppose it; influence of the weather; influence of the terrain; influence of the routes of communication on troop movement, evacuation, and supply.

1 Much of the data in an estimate of the situation can be shown advantageously on a map, overlay, or sketch and without repetition in the estimate. The graphical presentation of these data should clarify and shorten the estimate and should materially assist the commander in acting on estimates submitted for his approval.

c. Enemy's probable intentions.—Select from the plans open to the enemy that one which he will probably adopt and state the considerations which govern the selection made. Factors which should be considered in making the selection are the practicability of the plan, the preponderance of its advantages over its disadvantages to the enemy, the present attitude and past actions of the enemy, the characteristics of the enemy's commander so far as known, and the probable knowledge possessed by the enemy of his opponent's (your) strength, situation, and intentions.

4. Own Situation.

In the subparagraphs under this heading should appear a full consideration of the plans considered as open to you in view of your mission, the existing tactical situation, and of your strength and dispositions as compared with those of the enemy.

a. Plans open to you.—State, in general terms only, the plans considered as open to you, deduced as indicated in the introduction to paragraph 4.

b. Analyses of plans open to you.—With respect to each plan open to you, determine its practicability and weigh its advantages and disadvantages from your point of view. Factors which may be considered are generally of the same nature as those indicated in paragraph 3 b.

5. Decision.—State, in general terms only, so much of the intention of the commander as applies to the command as a whole. The decision is reached as a result of the analyses and the comparisons of all of the elements of the estimate made above. The decision is brief and contains the following vital elements: What is to be accomplished and when, where, how and why it is to be accomplished.

b. Advance guard:
   Commander.
   Troops.

1 Usually preceded by a warning order announcing hour at which the command will be ready to move, routes, troops to move first, instructions for outpost troops, and advance administration details, if any.
2 The "distribution of troops" may be placed either in paragraph 2, or on the left of the body of the order, occupying generally about one-third of the page, as shown in the succeeding form.
3 When this grouping consists of but one specific tactical organization, the name of the commander may be omitted unless special reasons exist for naming him.
4 When field or service trains march with any of the groupings of the distribution they will be shown. When not shown it is assumed that they are otherwise disposed of in an administrative order. When combat trains are excluded from any unit, that fact will be shown.
c. Main body—in order of march:
   Commander.

3. a. Instructions for cavalry—place and time of departure, roads or country to be covered, special missions, reconnaissance, special reports desired.

b. Instructions for advance guard—place and time of departure, or distance at which it is to precede main body, route, special missions.

c. Instructions for main body—place and time of departure or distance at which it is to follow advance guard.

d. Instructions for flank guard—place and time of departure, route, special missions, reconnaissance.

e. Instructions for aviation—reconnaissance, liaison, especially with Cavalry, selection of landing fields\(^6\) and time of moving thereto, instructions for balloon squadron if march is to be made with balloon inflated.

f. Instructions for the antiaircraft artillery with the command—general missions and special antiaircraft protection to be given during the advance.

a. Instructions for outpost—when relieved, subsequent duties. Other instructions applicable to whole command including antiaircraft protection, and special instructions for liaison.

4. When an administrative order is issued, refer to it by number. When one is not issued, give such instructions for supply, evacuation, traffic, trains, and personnel as are necessary in each case.

1. Information of the enemy and of friendly troops.

2. Decision of commander—generally to advance on or to a designated place or locality, mission, zone of advance when restriction is necessary. Reference may be made to march tables annexed.

3. a. Instructions for Cavalry—time and place of departure, roads or country to be covered, special missions, zone of action when restriction is necessary (usually same as for unit, especially when cavalry is employed on counterreconnaissance).

1 Usually preceded by a warning order announcing hour at which command will be ready to move, routes, troops to move first and instructions for outpost troops.

2 The "distribution of troops" may be omitted and the composition of each column given in the appropriate subparagraphs of paragraph 3, or the "distribution of troops" may be given in paragraph 2, as shown in the preceding form. When field or service trains march with any of the groupings of the distribution, they will be shown. When not shown it is assumed that they are otherwise disposed of in an administrative order. When combat trains are excluded from any unit, that fact will be shown.

3 When a unit marches in more than one column, each column ordinarily is preceded by an advance guard detailed by and directly responsible to the column commander.

b. Instructions for right column—time and place of departure, special missions, contact with adjoining units, security measures, route or routes within zone of action of the command, zone of action for the column when restriction is necessary.

c. Instructions for left column—same as under b.

d. Instructions for center column—same as under b.

When center column is used as reserve, or when it follows in rear of other columns, usually all that is necessary is to prescribe route, time, and place of departure or distance at which it is to follow.

When the superior commander retains command, give order of march.

e. Instruction for aviation—reconnaissance, liaison, especially with cavalry, selection of landing fields⁴ and time of moving thereto, instructions for balloon squadron if march is to be made with balloon inflated.

f. Instructions for the antiaircraft artillery with the command—general missions and special antiaircraft protection to be given during the advance.

x. Instructions applicable to whole command. May include general instructions as to contact, security, and antiaircraft protection, coordination of various columns, and special instructions as to liaison, etc.

FIELD ORDERS

Maps:
1. Information of the enemy and of friendly troops.
2. a. Decision of the commander—whether to make the main defense on or near the river line, or to hold the river line lightly, with the bulk of the division in rear of an organized position back from the river line, in readiness to intervene when the enemy's main crossing has been determined.
b. Section of the river line to be defended and location of the battle position.
c. Formation including boundary between units, when necessary.
3. a. Instructions for infantry—(a separate lettered sub-paragraph for each unit to which instructions are given) including attached engineers and artillery; conduct of the outpost; crossing fronts to be especially observed; tactical localities to be organized in the outpost and on the battle position.

1 The conditions and the situation for the defense of a river line or a sector of the coast line will vary greatly and this form should be used only as a most general guide in preparing the order for a defense that is adapted to the conditions existing in an actual or assumed situation. Initial orders for defense of a river line or coast line have many of the characteristics of an order for a "Position in readiness" and the form for such an order, page 82, may in some situations form a better guide for the order than the above form.
b. Instructions for artillery—attachment to infantry units, assignments in direct and general support, locations in which artillery will be held in readiness; points of probable crossings which the artillery will be prepared to cover by fire.

c. Instructions for any attached antiaircraft artillery including protection to be provided for general reserve in movement to counterattack.

d. Instructions for aviation—location of landing fields; line to which reconnaissance will be made; information especially desired, such as hostile movements toward probable crossing places; initial ascension points for balloons and missions of general observation and surveillance, including observation for the artillery.

e. Instructions for cavalry—location and reconnaissance.

f. Instructions for engineers.
   (1) Attachments to infantry units for organization of the ground.
   (2) Special work in connection with the defense, demolitions, and obstacles.

g. Instructions for reserves (including tanks usually held in reserve)—composition, location, and degree of readiness; plans for counterattacks.

h. Instructions for any other troops not otherwise covered, particularly for chemical troops and for the quartermaster regiment for rapid movement of reserve infantry units.

x. Instructions applicable to the whole command.
   (1) Measures for secrecy.

x. (1) Precautions as to secrecy, restrictions as to roads.
(2) Precautions as to security, as against airplane attack, mounting of auxiliary weapons on vehicles, etc.

1 For forms for entrucking table and work sheet for troop movement by motor transport, see paragraphs 39 and 41.
2 Avoid interference of columns by sending marching columns by different routes or starting after the motor transport columns.
(3) Provisions for marking entrucking points, assembly of troops, at entrucking points.

(4) Detachments left behind and instructions when and where to rejoin.

(5) Precautions as to march discipline, when necessary.

4. If an administrative order is issued, refer to it by number. If not issued, give instructions for trains, supply, and evacuation as necessary in each case.

5. Date and hour of opening and closing old and new command posts. (Some representative of division commander is maintained at old command post until last element moves.)

Maps:
1. Information of the enemy and of friendly troops.
2. Decision of commander—(to withdraw from action if engaged and) to retire to or in the direction of ———; time or priority of withdrawal from action of major units; number of columns for the retirement.

TROOPS²

3. a. Instructions for covering force—commander, composition, position, routes to position, time command of outpost passes to covering force commander in case of a retirement initiated at night, mission during withdrawal from action, route of retirement and missions during retirement. (Usually constitutes the rear guard.)

b. Instructions for cavalry not an element of covering force—reconnaissance, contact with enemy, special missions during the withdrawal from action and the retirement.

¹ When a retirement is made by a force not engaged in actual combat with the enemy, the appropriate order follows the form of a march order which provides for a rear guard with the command in one or more columns.

² Under “Troops,” give composition of each column with its commander. When field or service trains march with any of the groupings given in the distribution, they will be shown. When not shown, it is assumed that they are otherwise disposed of in an administrative order. When combat trains are excluded from any unit, that fact will be shown.
c. A separate lettered subparagraph for each column giving its route; initial point; time of clearing initial point (assembly position in a daylight retirement is given instead of an initial point, the command being formed in column from the former); other instructions applicable to the situation such as flank protection.

d. Instructions for aviation—reconnaissance, combat and special missions and reports, landing fields, dropping grounds; balloon observation and surveillance (or disposition of balloons).

e. Instructions for artillery—elements attached to rear guard or covering force, mission of units supporting the withdrawal, instructions for withdrawal by echelon including time of withdrawal and routes to assembly positions; special missions.

f. Instructions for rear guard—when not formed by covering force, give initial position, time it is to be assembled, distance from main body, reconnaissance, successive positions, special instructions.

g. Instructions for flank guard—give place and time of departure, route, reconnaissance, special instructions.

h. Instructions for any attached antiaircraft artillery, including special protection to be given during withdrawal, assembly and retirement.

i. Tactical instructions for engineers not attached to other units including especially instructions for obstacles and demolitions and for organization of any new defense positions.

j. Tactical instructions for attached troops of Chemical Warfare Service—special missions during withdrawal, attachments to covering force or rear guard, instructions for withdrawal.

k. Instructions applicable to the entire command which do not belong in another subparagraph—security, antiaircraft protection, special instructions as to liaison, etc., secrecy, priority on roads, reconnaissance of routes and positions, special reports as to location of units and situation.

4. When an administrative order is issued, refer to it by number. When one is not issued, give such instructions regarding supply, evacuation, traffic, trains, and personnel as may be necessary.

5. a. Signal communication—refer to annex when necessary.

   b. Axes of signal communication—prescribe that of unit and of subordinate units when the latter is considered necessary.

   c. Command posts—prescribe initial and subsequent command posts of unit and time of opening; if desired, the command posts, with time of opening, of subordinate units may be prescribed. These may be prescribed as en route but their location for the night should be designated when possible.

Maps:
1. Information of the enemy and of friendly troops.
2. Decision of commander—to withdraw from action, time movement is to begin, general purpose (usually to withdraw to and occupy a position), order in which units withdraw, zone of action, defensive or assembly position to be occupied, subsequent mission.

TROOPS

3. a. Instructions for covering force—commander, composition, mission, covering position and when it is to be occupied, routes, time of withdrawal.
b. Instructions for cavalry not an element of covering force—reconnaissance, contact with enemy, special missions.
c. Instructions for infantry (give separate lettered subparagraph for each infantry unit considered)—zone of action, time of withdrawal, assembly positions or sectors to be occupied in a defensive position, special missions.

1A “distribution of troops” is necessary only in those cases in which the unit withdraws from action in more than one column or in which separate mixed commands are desirable. It is particularly applicable to a withdrawal from action made at night. It should show the composition of the several elements—covering forces, right and left columns, etc. When field or service trains march with any of the groupings given in the distribution, they will be shown. When not shown, it is assumed that they are otherwise disposed of in an administrative order. When combat trains are excluded from any unit, that fact will be shown.

d. Instructions for artillery—elements attached to subordinate units or covering force, mission of units supporting the withdrawal; instructions for withdrawal by echelon, routes and new positions; special missions.

e. Instructions for aviation—reconnaissance, combat and special missions and reports, landing fields, dropping grounds; balloon observation and surveillance (or disposition of balloons).

f. Instructions for any attached antiaircraft artillery, including special protection during withdrawal and at critical points.

g. Tactical instructions for engineers.

h. Tactical instructions for attached troops of Chemical Warfare Service—special missions during withdrawal, attachments to covering force, new positions, routes, missions.

i. Add subparagraphs for other troops not part of covering force or attached to subordinate units.

x. Instructions applicable to the whole command which do not belong in another subparagraph—guides, concealment, secrecy, special security measures, antiaircraft protection, special instructions as to liaison, hour of passing of command of attached or special units, demolitions, obstructions, the time the movement is to be completed, special reports, etc.

4. When an administrative order is issued, refer to it by number. When one is not issued, give such instructions as to supply, evacuation, traffic, trains, and personnel as are deemed necessary.

1. a. Information of the enemy. (Refer to G–2 Report and G–2 Situation Map for details.)
   b. Information of friendly troops.
2. a. Decision of commander—general line to be defended.
   b. Organization of the ground.

Show in general terms, the location of the line of resistance of the outpost area, the battle position, the reserve battle position, and switch positions. (In regimental, brigade, division, and when time for planning permits, in corps orders, the regimental reserve line of the battle position is shown.)

3. a. Boundaries of sectors occupied by the command and by subordinate units or the boundary between subordinate units.

3. a. Infantry—assignment to sectors, special missions; use a separate subparagraph for each infantry unit holding a sector.

1 This form applies particularly to the organization of a defensive zone. For deployed and for position defense modify paragraph 2 b so as to apply to a defensive position, omit the clause of paragraph 3 b relating to artillery support of outpost area and battle position, and make appropriate changes in paragraph 3 a which will be much simplified.

b. Artillery—assignment and location of units for direct and general support, special missions; indication of the amount of artillery to support the outpost area and battle position (amount to be given in percentages, proportion, or number of batteries), provisions for antitank defense, instructions relative to time of opening fire, and the use of smoke and gas. (Amplify by annex.)

c. Reserves—designation of units; commander; positions; degree of readiness; work to be done in organization of position, preparation of plans for counterattacks or extension of flanks.

d. Tanks—assignment to reserve or to primary subdivisions; positions.

e. Cavalry—position (to cover one or both flanks, or main force held in suitable position to act in crises of engagement); reconnaissance.

f. Aviation—reconnaissance and observation; character of information especially desired; combat and special missions; balloon observation and surveillance.

g. Engineers—organizations attached to infantry and artillery units for organization of positions; special work in connection with defensive organization.

h. Tactical instructions for attached troops of Chemical Warfare Service—positions, routes, special missions, coordination with other troops, attachments, etc.

i. Instructions applicable to the whole command which do not belong in another subparagraph.

Conduct of defense:

(1) Mission assigned the outpost troops.
(2) Strength of outpost troops to be employed.
(3) Conduct of the outpost troops in case of a general attack—definite instructions to withdraw or to hold designated tactical localities to the last, depending upon the mission and situation.
(4) Counterattack—when made, by what units and by whom ordered.
(5) Directions for coordination of infantry and artillery defensive measures, fire plan.
(6) General instructions as to missions of machine guns of reserve units; arrangements for coordi-

FIELD ORDERS
No —

Maps:
1. Pertinent references to the corps field order, annexes, and appropriate summaries of intelligence; additional information of the enemy or supported troops, when necessary or desirable.

2. The general mission of the artillery with the corps (army).

3. a. Division artillery.

(1) Attachments to each division to include attachment of field artillery units (including sound and flash ranging units), balloon and antiaircraft units; time and place of attachment and time and place of relief if known.

¹ This form applies specifically to a corps artillery annex. When used for an army artillery annex, substitute “Artillery with the corps” for “Division artillery,” “Army artillery” for “Corps artillery,” and “Artillery with the army” for “Artillery with the corps.” While the form includes those items usually necessary, additional items are included as necessary or desirable. Further, while the listing of the items is that often most appropriate, the general rule for combat orders is that items governing a single unit are listed in the paragraph pertaining to that particular unit; and items governing more than one unit, in the general paragraph. Thus, in the case of an artillery annex to a corps field order, any particular item applying to a division would be listed in the paragraph applying to the particular division, or in the general paragraph applying to divisions, or in the general paragraph applying to the artillery with the corps, as appropriate.
(2) Etc. A separate numbered paragraph for each division to which it may be necessary to give particular instructions, such as for contingent zones; coordination of fires along the boundaries and in depth; special missions including general location of fires during the preparation.

(-) A numbered subparagraph containing the miscellaneous provisions not covered elsewhere and applicable to more than one division, such as—

Time of opening fire.
Restrictions on fire.
Coordination with corps artillery units including the allocation of counterbattery missions to the division artillery.
General limits in depth for harassing and interdiction fires and fires on transient targets.
Use of accompanying artillery, antitank guns, and roving artillery.
Movement into position and changes of position.
Allotment of observation facilities (both air and ground) and communication therewith.
Use of special ammunition including gas and smoke.

b. Corps artillery.

(1) Organization of the corps artillery into groupments or other units, listing the composition and commander of each when any change has been made from that given in Tables of Organization.

(2) Etc. For each of the above designated units, a separate numbered paragraph giving—

Missions, to include—
Zones of responsibility in depth and width for interdiction and harassing fires, fires on transient targets, and counterbattery.
Contingent zones.
Coordination of fires in depth.
Special missions including general location of fires during the preparation or counterpreparation, and reenforcement of the fires of the division artillery on call.
Position areas, routes, movement into position, organization of the position, and priority of selection in reserved areas.
Changes of position during action including time or priority, and routes to new position areas.

(-) A numbered subparagraph containing instructions for the antiaircraft units including missions, positions, movements, and cooperation with aviation.

(-) A numbered subparagraph containing instructions for attached balloon units and instructions regarding all aviation available for observation for the corps artillery including cooperation with the antiaircraft units.

(-) A numbered subparagraph containing instructions for sound and flash units.

(-) A numbered subparagraph containing the miscellaneous provisions not covered elsewhere and applicable to more than one subdivision of the corps artillery, such as—Reconnaissance.
Use of special ammunition including gas and smoke.
Liaison instructions.
Establishment of dumps.
Rear echelons.

2. Artillery with the corps.—Miscellaneous provisions applicable to both the division and corps artillery not specifically covered elsewhere, such as—
General nature of the fires prior to the attack or counterpreparation.
General instructions covering schedule fires including preparation and counterpreparation.
Measures to insure secrecy including limitations on registration.
Limitations on ammunition expenditure.
Topographical and meteorological data.
Defense against tanks and aviation.

4. Reference to the corps administrative order; additional instructions, when necessary or desirable.
5. Instructions covering command posts and signal communication, as necessary or desirable.

   g. Chemical troops.
   h. Miscellaneous.

6. COMBAT EFFICIENCY. (Arrived at by consideration of the status of training, the losses in officers, men, animals, and material, the morale, and any other conditions peculiar to the unit considered. For divisions, this report should show efficiency of combat regiment; it may include other units, as special troops.)

7. RESULTS OF OPERATIONS.

(Signature of chief of section)

1 Submitted as ordered by the commander. To be supported by such maps and appendices as are necessary to make a complete record of the existing situation and of the operations during the period. When any part of the subject matter of the report can be shown clearly on a map, this should be done. In such cases no entry need be made under the appropriate heading of the report except the statement, "See map attached." Brigades and lower units usually submit one report based on the appropriate topical headings of the four section reports.

Motor transport conversion chart (trucks; yards; time)

(For converting yards into time distance: Read on scale (a) the number of yards to be converted. Follow a vertical line over this point to its intersection with the diagonal indicating the proper rate per hour. Read off on the left-hand marginal scale, "time distance.")

For converting trucks to be loaded into time lengths (see columns 2 and 3, work sheet); Read on scale (b) the number of trucks in group. Follow a vertical line over this point to its intersection with the diagonal indicating the rate per hour prescribed. Read off on the left-hand marginal scale the "time length" of the group.)

12825°—32. (Face p. 132.) No. 1
(Sample of chart that can be made for computing readily the number of trucks required for troop movements by motor transport when the capacity of the trucks available is known. On the lowest line of the chart, "men," locate the point corresponding to the number of men to be moved. Follow a vertical line over this point to its intersection with the diagonal describing the troops to be moved. The point on the left-hand marginal scale opposite this intersection gives the number of 3-ton trucks required; on the right the number of 1½ or 2-ton trucks.)

1. INFORMATION.

a. Information, if any, as to the situation confronting the unit in so far as it affects training. (Such as, probable mobilization, movement, or use for a specific purpose or in a specific theater.)

b. Citation of orders, regulations, policies, or training guides which govern the conduct of training and which have been previously issued or are otherwise available to all concerned.

2. GENERAL PLAN.

a. General mission or training objective (usually prescribed by higher authority).

b. General allotment of time or division of period into phases, showing—

   (1) Time reserved by higher commanders.
   (2) Time reserved by the issuing commander.

---

3 This form may be adapted for use in the preparation of a territorial, post, or camp training program by inserting in paragraph 3 a separate subparagraph for each separate component or training activity in the command.
(3) Time allotted for duties other than training, holidays, etc.
(4) Time remaining at the disposal of subordinate commanders.

c. Date the training program becomes effective.

a. Instructions governing the training of the unit as a whole, giving—

(1) Dates and general character of such training.
   (In company programs an allotment of hours for instruction in the various subjects is given here.) (Detailed schedules covering this training are issued separately later.)

(2) Instructions as to tactical and training inspections with dates of tactical inspections by issuing and higher authority and instructions for proficiency tests by or under the direct supervision of the issuing commander.

b. Training to be conducted by subordinate commanders. A separate subparagraph for each next subordinate unit, giving—

(1) Its mission or training objective.

(2) Division of the training into phases or periods, if necessary, and a training objective or subject for each period or phase.

(3) Allocation of training facilities with dates and hours available.

(4) Special instructions, if any, necessary for its training.

(5) Inspection calendar showing dates the next subordinate unit will be inspected for proficiency in various subjects.

c. Instructions in regard to schools.

(1) Instructions governing the conduct of post or troop schools or enrollment in extension course schools conducted by the issuing officer or higher authority.

(2) Instructions in regard to schools to be conducted by subordinate commanders.
a. General instructions applicable to the unit as a whole or to more than one unit.

1. Instructions as to training standards, proficiency tests, and records of progress.
2. Special features of training, if any, which must be stressed.
3. Instructions as to the submission of programs or schedules by subordinate commanders.
4. Instructions, if any, for the keeping of training charts or other training records.
5. Instructions in regard to special subjects, such as—
   (a) Physical training.
   (b) Athletics.
   (c) Practice marches.
   (d) Target practice.
   (e) Defense against chemical attacks.
   (f) Antiaircraft defense.
   (g) Ceremonies.
   (h) Riot duty.

5. ADMINISTRATIVE INSTRUCTIONS.

a. Instructions, if any, for the regulation of administrative duties, guard, and fatigue so as to provide the maximum time and personnel for training.

b. Instructions, if any, for the submission of estimates of funds required for training purposes.

c. Instructions, if any, for the use, care, and maintenance of training facilities.

d. Instructions, if any, relating to leaves of absence and furloughs in their relation to training.

e. Instructions, if any, relating to uniforms and equipment in their relation to training.

ABBREVIATIONS

42. Abbreviations.—a. General.—In general, the use of abbreviations on account of the liability of their being misunderstood is not favored. However, the desirability of saving time and space has led to the authorization of certain simple, widely known abbreviations and to the formulation of rules for their use in order to obviate the objection to their employment.

b. Classification.—With respect to their use in combat orders including their annexes and in field messages, abbreviations are classified as follows:

1. Certain conventions that have been generally adopted by the public at large and are universally understood, such as, AM and PM for the periods of the day before and after noon, respectively, and No for number.

2. Specific conventions that have been adopted in the military service, as RJ for road junction, CR for crossroads, and BM for bench mark, when these terms are used as part of the designation of a particular point (e.g., RJ 601, BM 890; CR at (350.5-750.3)), and incl and excl for inclusive and exclusive, respectively.

3. Standard abbreviations used to designate grade, abbreviations covering military organizations and fractions thereof, a few military terms, the names of the months, and the names of the States and Territories of the United States and similar subdivisions of foreign countries.

c. Use of abbreviations.—(1) The use of the abbreviations named in b (1) and (2) above are usual in all parts of written combat orders including their annexes and in written field messages. Abbreviations, except AM and PM when referring to the hours of the day, are not ordinarily used in orders which are dictated or given orally nor in telephone messages.

(2) Except as noted in (3) below, the use of the class of abbreviations referred to in b (3) above is optional. Clearrness is essential. When one of this class of abbreviations is used in one place in an order, it should be used, where authorized, throughout the order. Only abbreviations that are familiar to subordinates should be used. As a rule, these abbreviations are used only in messages or orders written by hand. In typed orders, it is usually quicker and easier to write out the words in full.
Abbreviations are always used in lists of annexes and in the distribution at the end of orders.

d. Dates.—When abbreviations are used, dates are written thus, 1 Jan 24.

e. List.—(1) General.—The list in (2) below contains only the authorized abbreviations frequently used in combat orders, messages, records, and reports in the field. It should be noted that with few exceptions all abbreviations are written without spacing and that periods are not used. Whenever practicable, abbreviations have been grouped in order to economize space. In each case the abbreviation not inclosed in parentheses plus any one of those inclosed will give a proper abbreviation, as for example:

Hq (Btry) (Co)—Hq Btry; Hq Co.

When an abbreviation is not made up by grouping the abbreviations of the component words, the special abbreviation is given separately, as, for instance, DHQ for division headquarters instead of Div Hq. For a more detailed list of abbreviations, see paragraph 2, AR 850-150.

(2) List of abbreviations.

the enemy are shown in red. The only exceptions are the following:

(a) Symbols for areas to be covered by friendly fire or gas though always located in enemy territory are executed in blue.

(b) Symbols for gassed areas, wherever located, are always executed in red.

(3) The position of the various letters, numbers, or abbreviations designating definite units with respect to the symbol representing the type of unit will be as follows:

(a) Serial numbers of armies, corps, divisions, brigades, regiments, separate battalions, separate companies, or similar separate units are placed on the right.

(b) Numbers designating battalions in a regiment are placed on the left.

(c) Letters designating companies, troops, or batteries are in capitals and are placed on the left. Companies, troops, or batteries (not separate), and other elements of a unit are designated by name instead of by letter; as for example, "Howitzer Company, 3d Infantry" or "Service Troop, 3d Cavalry" will be designated by the use of the proper abbreviation in capital letters on the left.

(d) Abbreviations for explanatory purposes will be in small letters on the right. Abbreviations may be used instead of symbols to show information that can not be indicated by a single symbol; such as, the area occupied by the service trains of a division, in which case capital letters will be used.

(e) Calibers will be shown by numbers and unit of measure; as, 37-mm, 42-cm, 12".

(4) Abbreviations used will conform to those listed in Section III, Chapter 2.

b. Basic symbols.—(1) Indicating purpose or character of activity.

Military post or station; command post or headquarters

(Lower end of staff or symbol will terminate at point of establishment represented.)

Troop unit

(On large scale maps where troop units can be shown to scale, this symbol may be modified so as to show area occupied by units in column or line, thus:

Line Column.)
