A CALL TO A BREED THAT NEVER DIES

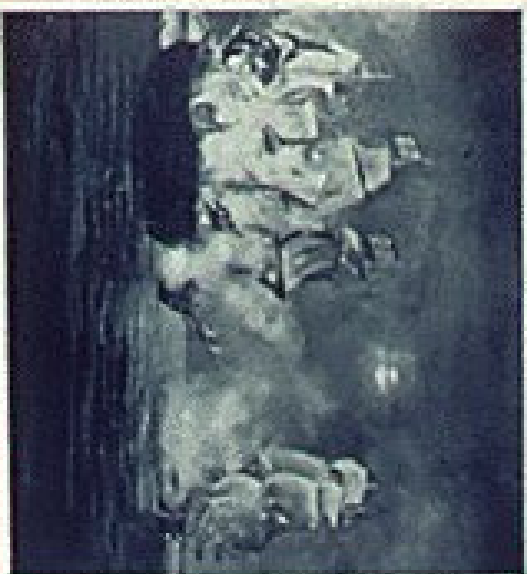

"WHERE are they now?" said John Paul Jones.
"The men like the men I know."
*The hardy men who sailed with me
 When I made up the Ranger's crew?
 Has the broad dead sea? Are they all asleep
 In the sea with Devere's bones?
 There MUST be men like the men I know!"*
 Said John Paul Jones.

"YOU'RE right!" said Perry, the Commodore.
"I know such men on the Lake
 When we launched our ships and took the chance
 The men of our breed will take!"
"We have met the enemy... he is ours!"
THAT was our spirit then!
 Where is it now? Is the spirit gone?
 Does America have no MEN?"

SAID the shade of Devere: "I know them, too!
 My men of the Great White Fleet,
 When the crew of the Oregon bade us wait
 Till they and the fleet could meet.
 And they drove her fourteen thousand miles
 From half the world away
 To join the fight that Sampson fought At Santiago Bay!"

WHERE are they now? Where they always were--
 They bend our deck and bow,
 Answering the word to man the guns--
 Answering the word to go!
 And the word is out... you are needed now
 Where the sea-side awaits and dips...
 From orchard and office, from city and place
 Come join the Navy, come man the ships!

MEMORANDUM: I HAVE NOT YET RECEIVED THE REPORTS
 John Paul Jones received from America's ships and ships. At 17, following the death of his father, the education. Richard's father, of 17 years, and the British, a ship of 18 guns, he was in the English, who later had it re-armed and sent the British Edward Jones and to become and served during Spanish. This action is recorded in the report of John Paul Jones, and in the very next month he received the report that the ship was returned to port in the United States by request

John Paul Jones, possibly incorrectly, the father of Freedom and Honor have been often commemorated on the great vessels in service with the American Flag from 1792 through 1900. He joined the crew of the ship in 1773, and in 1775 he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant. He was promoted to the rank of captain in 1776, and in 1779 he was promoted to the rank of commodore. He was promoted to the rank of rear admiral in 1780, and in 1781 he was promoted to the rank of full admiral. He was promoted to the rank of vice admiral in 1782, and in 1783 he was promoted to the rank of admiral. He was promoted to the rank of admiral of the fleet in 1789, and he died in 1792.

THE U.S.S. MARBLEHEAD COMES HOME!

Whenever men gather to speak of heroic deeds the saga of the Marblehead will rank with the greatest. After the battle of Marston Strait this gallant ship took her place in the line and accepted the challenge of a vastly superior foe. With guns blazing a torrent of steel she fought her way clear only to be bombed without quarter from the skies.

The enemy reported her at sunk. With steering gear shattered, with great gaping holes in her sides, she started her epic thirteen thousand mile voyage to safety. Only the courage, stamina and resourcefulness of men who would not "give up the ship" brought her home.

If good red fighting blood flows in your veins, if you want the comradeship of men such as those on the Marblehead—go to your nearest Navy Recruiting Station today!

There's a billet in the U. S. Navy waiting for you.
